

Cold task: I can describe a setting.

A neverending path stretches through the mystifying wood of: lies, confusion and the ~~bewildering~~ unknown. Willow trees tower over the path, ceasing in the darkness, and ~~and~~ Not a soul is near, for all who enter, disappear off the face of the earth. ~~But some~~ But if one was to enter, one would not be alone. Something is lurking in the shadows, watching, waiting, listening to the deadly silence.

Deep in the wood, a ~~so~~ tiny tick echoes throughout the ~~the~~ trees, banishing the silence. It extends and fills each hole, and each hollow. A ~~pocket watch~~ rusting pocket watch, flies out of a ~~rot~~ rabbit hole. Its numerals ~~is~~ facing all directions, and hands, crooked. Around the edge is a few faded letters: 'Tea, time'.

out of the hole ~~is~~, ~~is~~ something struggles. ~~up~~ A rabbit, with silk ~~at~~ fur as white as the smooth, delicate clouds, on a nice day. He is greeted by a ~~a~~ top-hat. ~~The~~ top-hat is followed by a man. His hair wispy, and big, and ginger. His bright green eyes, gleam. They stand out greatly in the darkness. The stone-cold air, burn the back of his throat. He smiles widely at his dear friend as they step out into their greatest adventure yet.

This half term our focus in English is descriptive writing. This is a tremendous cold task, completed under time pressure, by Maddie. Whilst there are some errors, the vocabulary she has used is brilliant. Maddie if this is your cold task, I can't wait to read your hot task!
